"That is just the point," replied Sturgls: "unother witness will be biased by his interests or prejudices, blinded by jenlousy, love or hatred, or handicapped by overzealousness. stupidity, lack of memory, or what not. Circumstantial evidence la always impartial, truthful, absolute. When the geologist rends the history of the earth, as it is written in its crust; when a Kepler or a Newton formulates the immutable laws of the universe, as they are recorded in the motions of the heavenly hodies, they draw their conclusions from evidence which is entirely circumstantial." "Yes; hut you forget that science ans often been mistaken la its conclusions," interrupted Sprague, "so that it has constantly been necessary to alter theories to fit newly nequired or better understood facts.

"Granted," rejoined Sturgis, "but that is because the interpreters of the evidence are fallible; not because the evidence itself is incomplete. The same cause will always produce the same effect; the same chuln of events will invariably terminate in one and the same catastrophe. The apparent deviations from this law are due to unrecognized differences in the producing causes, to additional or missing links in the chain of evidence. Therefore I hold that a criminal, however clever he may be, leaves be alnd him a complete trace of his every act, from which his crime may be reconstructed with absolute certainty by a competent détective."

"In short, 'Murder will out!" said a man who had been a slient listener to the conversation up to this point. barely escaped being a polite sneer. Sturgis' keen eyes met his interlocutor's as he replied gravely: "I should hardly eare to make so sweeping an affirmation, Dr. Murdock. I have merely stated that the history of every erime is indelibly written in tanglble evidence. The writing is on the wall, but of course a blind man cannot see it, nor can an illiterate man understand lt. seum on Governor's Island, N. The Indian on the trail reads with an experienced eye the story of his enemy's passage, as it has been recorded in trodden turf and broken twigs; while the bloodhound follows. with unerring judgment, a still surer though less tangible truil. The latter's quarry has left behind, at every step, un invisible, imponderable, and vet unmistakable part of itself. Perhaps my meaning can be made clear by an illustration. When a photographer in his dark room takes an exposed plate from his eamern, it is upparently a blank; but in reality there is upon this plate the minutely detailed history of an event, which, In proper hands, can be brought before the least competent of observers as .rrefutable evidence. Here, the actinic rays of the sunlight are the authors of the evidence; but every natural force, in one way or unother, conspires with the detective to run the erlminal to earth."

"Enless," suggested Murdock, "the ability happens to be on the side of the junrry; in which case, the conspiracy of nature's forces turns against the

"In my apinion," piped the shrill voice of un elderly man of elevical aspect, "conscience is the surest detective, after all.

"Conscience!" retorted Murdock. enlmly; "the word is a euphemism Man gives the name of conscience to his fear of discovery and punishment. There is no such thing as conscience in the criminal who has absolute confldence in his power to escape detec tion."

"Itut where is the man who can have that superb confidence in himself? asked Sprague.

"Itis name is probably legion," answered Murdock, quickly. "He is the author of every erime whose history remains forever unwritten."

"And are these really so numerous.?" "Let us see how the ease stands in one single class of crime-say, for instance, murder. Whenever the solution of a sensational murder mystery is effected by the detectives, or by their nHies, the gentlemen of the press, like our friend Mr. Sturgis, we, the guilible public, vociferously appland the achievements of these guardians of the public safety, and forthwith proceed to nward them a niche in the temple of Fame. So far, so good. But what of the dark mysteries which remain forever unsolved? What of the numerous crimes of which no one ever even knows?"

"Oh! come now, doctor," laughed Sprague, "isn't it rather paradoxical to base your argument on the assumption of crimes of whose very existence you admit you have no knowledge?"

Murdack smiled grimly us he replied: "tio to the morgne of any large city where the unrecognized dead are exposed for identification. Aside from the morbid crawd which is drawn to such a place by uncanny curiosity, you will thad that each corpse is auxiously scanned by numbers of people, each of whom is seeking a missing friend or relative. At the most each body can furnish the key to only one mystery Then what of the scores, us, the hun dreds of others?"

After a short pause, he continued: "No; murder will not out-at least not when the criminal is what I might call a professionat, a man of genius in his vocation, educated, intelligent, dis passionate, scientific. Fortunately for the reputation of the detective, minateur and professional, the genius in the criminal line is necessarily of a modest and retiring disposition. He cannot call the public attention to his ingennity and skill; he cannot puff his achieveents in the daily press. Not only are his masterpieces unsigned, but they remain forever unheard of. The detective is known only by his successes; the criminal's reputation is based solely upon his tailures."

Dr. Murdock delivered this parting shot with the cool deliberateness which was characteristic of the man. The insolent frony of his words was emphasized by the calmness of his hearing.

"I say, doctor," laughed Sprague. 'you have missed your vocation. You should have adopted the profession of scientific criminal yourself. You seem to possess the theory of the relence is it is, and a little experience would no doubt have made you an adept in the practice as well."

A look of mild amusement passed over Murdock's countenance.

"Perhaps you are right, Mr. Sprague. At any rate, I think I may affirm, without overweening conceit, that If I had followed the course you suggest, I could have prepared for your friend Mr. Sturgis same pretty little problems on which to sharpen his wits. I feel that I could have been un artist as well us a scientist in that line,"

"You might console yourself by writing an interesting and valuable book, under some such title as 'llints to the Young Criminal,' or 'Crime as a Fine Art. At all events, your erlminals of genius have a stanch advocate la you. ltut what on curth have the detectives done to you to call forth this wholesale vitueration?"

"Nothing. But, as a disinterested observer, I like to see fair play. If I am mistuken in my estimution of the modern detective, I am open to conviction. I have $5,000 to wager uguinst $100 that I can pick up any daily paper and from its columns select an unsolved riddle to which no detective on the face of the earth can give the answer. Have luny taker, gentlemen?"

As he spoke, his eyes met Sturgis' and suddenly seemed to flash with nu eurnest deliance, which instantly melted Into the enim, cynical smile of the man of the world

"And," he added, with a supercilious smile, "you are at liberty to fix the limit of time in which the wager must be decided."

"Hear! hear!" exclaimed a young broker. "This is becoming luteresting, and promises some sport for those of us who are giddy enough to enjoy staking something on this novel contest. I, for one, am willing to lay reasonable odds on the side of law and order, as represented by the enlightened press, in the person of our clever friend Sturgis. Come, Chadwlek, will two to one ngainst the scientific criminal tempt you to champion the cause of that apparently unappreciated individual?" Spargue's stag dinner was virtually over when a servant brought his copy of the Evening Tempest. The dessert had been removed, the coffee and liqueurs had been served, and the guests had lighted their eignrs. The host passed the newspaper to Dr. Murdock, who proceeded to glance leisurely through its columns.

"Ah! this will do," he exclaimed, at last. "Here is something which will, I think, unswer our purpose-

"MYSTERIOFS SHOTS IN WALL STREET. WHO FIRED THEM?

STORY OF A STRAY SATCHEL. THE COLCE PUZZLED.

"White on his bent, at a quarter east five ectock this atternoon, Collection John Citynn, hearing the report of a pistot froor the direction of the knickerbo ter bank -

"The Knickerbocker bank!" interrupted the young broker, "Mr. Dunian, that Interests you. Do your directors indulge in pistol practice at the board meetings! "What is that about the Knickerbockr bank?" asked the man to whom this speech was addressed. Having been enguged with his neighbor in an carnest discussion on financial questions, be had not been listening to the general conversation Murdock adjusted his eyeglasses and quietly resumed: "Policeman John Citynu bearing the re-port of a pistol from the direction of the Knickertocker took, in Wall street, startdaithe top of his speed toward that belid-ng. When he was within about 29 yards ng When he was within about 29 vards of the tank enother shot rangout, and si the some instant a man duried down the steps and ran toward throadway."

Richard Dunlap, president of the Knickerbocker bank, was listening attentively enough now. Behind the calm mask of the licaneier there was the evident anxlety of the bank president. For the stability of a bank, like the honor of a woman, is at the mercy of every passing tumor.

"tle carried in his hand a small satchet, which he drapped as soon as he saw that he was pursued. After an exciting chase Ftynn overtook his man, whom he recog-nized as Michael Quinlan, atlas Shorty tioff, a well-known sneak thief. On the way back to the bank the paleconn queritoned bis prisaner about the justot shot Quintan vehemonity denied baying fired them; but admitted that he had stolen the satchel Itis story to that, as ti passing the bank, the outer door vas sjer. Seeing the setchet in the vestitule, he entered, crouching low in order to avoid being seen through the inner door, the opper portion of which is of plate glass. Senres-ly had he leid his hadds upon the saichel when he was startled by the report of a pistot. For a moment he was dozed and undecided how to act. Then, as no one cemed to take any notice of the presence he was quietly siteplog off, when a second shot was fired. Paute-sitteken, he took to shot was need. Patte-stricken, he took to his heels, only to be conjured by Flynn. "On reaching the took Flynn found the outer door closed, but not fastened. The heavy from gate between it and the innerdoor was securely looked, however, so that it was impossible to enter. The Katckerlineker tank has a second entrance on thethange place. But this, ino, is protected by a massive from gale, which also was found locked. Flynn rapped for assistance, and the call having been answered by Co-licemen Kitpairtek und O'Honnett, be tefi the former to widen the Exchange place door, and the faller to gunrd the entrace on Wall street, white he look his prisoner to the police station. 'Messengers were at once disputched to the house of Richard Dunlay, the prest-dent of the bank, and to that of Mr Teorge S. Rutherford, the coshler. The former was not at frome, and the faintly being out of lown, there was no one who knew where he was spending the evening." Every eye turned toward Richard Dunlap as this paragraph was read. His teatures remained Impassive, under the full control of the veteran linancier; but to an observant eye like Sturgis', the man's real unviety was beirnyed by the unconscious action of his right hand, which by upon the table and played nervously with a fork.

"Yes," said the banker, ear lessly, feeling the enrious gaze of the other guests upon him, and answering their unspoken questions, "yes, that is true; I dld not tell my hansekeeper that I was invited to dine by our friend Sprague this evening. There was, of course, no reason why I should. Well, Dr. Murdock, did they find Rutherford?"

Murdock had looked up while the banker was speaking. He now lelsurely found his place and continued the reading of the article in the Tempest: "The cashler fortunately was at home, and he turried down lown id once with his set of book keys. Two detectives from the central office accompanied him, and the three men carefully searched for premises. They found nothing out of the way there, except that three gas jets were lighted and turned on full blaze. At first the detectives were inclined to think that bank robbers tact gatued on cutrauce to the building; and that one of them, having chught sight of Shorty that as he renched in to steal the taichel from the vestitute, had fired upon tilor. This would explain the pistot shots heard by Flynn. A careful examination of the bank, however, fatled to reveal any trace of a bullet.

"The valler, when opened, proved to con-tain only a change of linen for a man and a few tollet articles of but slight intrinsic The satchet Itself is an ordinary heap leather handbag, stamped in imitathen of alligator skin.

some light on the mystery of the plate shots."

When Dr. Murdock had finished read-When Dr. Murdock had finished reading, everybody, except Dunlap and Sturgis, looked disappointed. The former settled buck in his chair, the muscles of his face relaxed, and the auxious bank president once more heenme the genial and polished man of the world. The reporter sat gazing thoughtfully at his wineglass.

"Well, Mr. Sturgis," said Murdock. "what do you think of my little prob-

"I have already been assigned to work up this case for the Tempest," answered the reporter, quietly.

"Indeed? Perhaps you are the author of this very article? No? Then nre you willing to make the solution of this little mystery the subject of our wager and the test of your theo-on, doctor," exclaimed "Hold Springue; "you are doing Sturgis in injustice. Why pick out, as a test al his ability, a problem which, to all intents and purposes has already been salved by the police? Give him some truly knotty question and he will be in his element; and then, at least, some interest will attach to your wager." "Ah! you think the problem has already been solved?" read is started out as if it were going to prove interesting; but, instead of that, it ends in an anti-climax. What is the crime here? The confessed theft. by a petty sneak thief, of a sutchel worth, with its contents, perhaps eight or ten dollars. And where is the mystery? The ownership of a few pieces of unmarked linen of so little value that the owner does not care to take the trouble to claim them."

"I eannot agree with you, Mr Sprngue. While the crime in this case may be a petty theft, it contains, to my mind, interesting features, which you appear to lose sight of in your disdalaful summary. The problem, it seems to me, involves a suitable explanation of two rather mysterious platol shots. to say nothing of such minor details as lighted gas jets behind securely locked gates. As Mr. Storgis has informed us, In his carnest and held way, every cffeet has a cause. I should like to know the cause that lighted the gas in the Knickerbocker bank."

"I shall probably find out that couse the day after to-morrow," said Mr. Dunlag, smiling, "and I shall give the fellow a talking to for his carelessness in forgetting to turn out the gas when he locked up." "Mr. Dunlap's suggestion," continued Murdock, "is plausible in liself and we might even assume that the same careless employe, after locking up the bank, forgot to close the outer duor on the Wall street alde. But even then, we have not disposed of the ownership of the satchel nor of the two pistol shots. The police theory that these shots were fired by bank robbers seems, l adult, very far-fetched. Profession al cracksmen would hardly be likely to thre unless cornered; and then they would fire to kill or at least to disable If their bullets failed to hit the mark they would nt any rate lenve aonie

ORIGIN OF SCUTAGE.

A Feudal Tax That Was Exacted to the Ttore of Henry H. of England.

The tax or feudul payment known ios "scutage" is in all our books described as a device introduced by Henry 11. In 1186 or 1159, by which his tenants in chief, the fendal nobles of England, were allowed or required to pay a fixed sum in money in lieu of the fulfillment of the military requirements of their tenure, that is, te serve the king in the field with a certhin number of followers. This, says the International Monthly, was supposed to have had the twofold advantage-ludged, to have been introduced for the twofold purpose-of providing the umbitions king with money with which to hire a more mobile and effeetive military force, and of weakening the military habits of the great assals. It appears, however, on close er investigation, that sentages had been collected before the time of Henry H., and that they were not so much commutations of military service as ic special form of fendal Imposition scarcely distinguishable from the aid or the donum, though, it is true, collected when otherwise a summons to Letunl military service might have been expected. This is not the only instance where a closer study of the records has recently deprived famous rulers of the traditional credit of inttinting far-reaching lines of policy.

Lesson in the Intrinstional Series for July 29, 1800 - The Transfiguration.

[Prepared by H. C. Lenington.] THE LESSON TEXT,-1, uke 9:28-36. GOLDEN TEXT,-This is My beloved Sear bear Him.-Lake mas.

NOTES AND COMMENTS. The event of this lesson occurred probably on Mount Hermon or one of Ita opurs in the vicinity of Cesarea, about a week after last lesson, in the autumn of A. It. 29. The story of the healing of the demonlac hoy immeshould be studied in connection with the lessnus, and also desus' second aanouncement of His death and resurrection, all of which is given in lake 9:28-45. Parallel accounts of the transfiguration are found in Matthew 17:1-13 and Mark 9:2-13.

Jeons and Hisciples in Prayer .-- We note again and again in the study of the life of Jesus the relation of prayer to the events of greatest hunortance. We may well think of the 40 days of temptation in the whilerness as 40 days of prayer, for it was then that the great lasnes of Ille life (humanly speaking) were decided as for God and linnianity. The night preceding the choosing of Ills apostles and the utterance of the seriaon on the mount was spent alone in prayer. Ami now on the eve of another great revelation of Himself to three of Itls disciples we find Him with them (Peter, John and James) going "up into a mountaln to pray.

The Transfiguration .- "And as He prayed, the fushion of lis counte-nance was altered;" The transfiguration seeme to one of the most wonderful in all history, but at the same time it has its analogy in every imman life. There is a short season, as with the illselpies, when we seem transported beyond ourselves and we seem torce the facr of God in all its wondrone beauty and power. We have seen the face of a loved one lit up with a more than earthly light, when the face has become transfigured. In a moment of uncommon sympathy, a moment of entering into the life and heart of that other as over before and perhaps never again, we have seen into the depths of the eyes and found not a face but a soul of divine beauty. Conference on the Mountain .- "And, beliefd, there talked with llim two men, which were Muses and Illus (Elijah):" It has been remarked by students of the Hible that here we have a conference between the leaders of three great principles in re-ilgious life. Moses represented the law. He was the great law-giver of cago, Ill. the Jewish nation. Elljah represented the prophets. In their teaching the Jewish rabble niways thought of the Mosale law as the basis and foundation of their religion. The prophecies reenforced this law as showing national prosperity as the result of chedlence to that law, and national Beendence the natural effect of the falling away from that law. Jesus stood for a new principle-the Gospel, He came to offer a free salvation from sin and the death which the Mosale law had declared the penalty of mountain. And they talked (verse 31) of Jesus' approaching heath on the eross. Ituring this conference Peter, John and James, nader some mysterlous influence, fell asleep. When they awoke they saw the glory of Jesus and lils two companions. Note, la passing, one important teaching of this event, viz.: The reality of the future life. Moses and Ettjah could not have come lack to earth had death ended all. Their personality they preserved through the years and centuries, and they came now to inspire faith in the disciples and to give comfort to the limman Christ. The Voice Out of the Cloud,-When' Peter was fully awake, he subl: "Muster, It is good for us to be here," This suggests a question which must be answered in the negative. Peter did not know what really was good for him. He must needs yet go through many hard experiences, times of discouragement, the routine of common toll. This imment of exaltation, spiritual and physical, was to serve merely as an Inspiration to great endeavor, and a glimpse into the future happiness prepared for the faltliful. Even while he was speaking there came a cloud about them, and out of the cloud God spoke: "This is my beloved Son. Hear Illm."

The Demonlar Boy.-Two lessons Are prominent in this story. Read Mark's account, 9:14-32. The first lesson is the faith of the father of the demonlae which made possible the healing touch of Jesus. This father unhellef." The second lesson comes out of the fallure of the disciples to heal the boy. When pressed for the reason, Jesus sabl: "This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting" (Mark 11:29.)

Jesus' Heath and Resurrection Foretold .- Jesus and Ills discules now returned to Capernaum, and on the way (Matthew 17:22, 23) Jesus foretells Ills betraval, death and resurrection. The discludes did not understand, but something in his manner forbade them questioning Him about it.

Who Owns Berea College?

Many people, even some who live in the village of Berea, do not fully understand the aims and workings of this great institution.

Before the War as we ull have heard, it was begins, or founded, are rejoicing. John G. Fee, J. A. R. Rogers, John Hanson and others drew up a constitution, or agreement, that was the beginning of the College. This constitution begins with the words, "In order to promote the Cause of Christ." All that has been done by this school is in Christ's name and for His glory.

The Constitution goes on to say that the object of the College shall post-office at Elfred Eversole's on be to furnish a thorough education to Cow Creek. all worthy young people, at the least possible expense in money.
